

Employee Solutions

In a full employment economy, recruiting, retaining and upskilling your employees is a pressing challenge for most HR managers in the private and public sectors. Our experience of researching employees and the wider labour market enables us to guide clients through research to deliver better recruitment and engagement strategies for people-based success.

Case Study: Solas

Barriers to Participation

Customer Requirements:

To examine the extrinsic and intrinsic barriers to participation in Further Education & Training (FET), SOLAS commissioned Amárach Research to carry out a national research project.

Research Approach:

Amárach Research designed and employed a mixed mode approach to this project including a literature review and a series of 32 interviews with a wide range of FET stakeholders; plus 6 focus groups with potential learners, current learners, educators & employers.

Research Output:

The findings have been published* and have contributed to the formulation of communications and policy initiatives in the area of Future Education and Training.
